Kathy Kelly was a member of the Iraq Peace Team, a group of international citizens who stayed in Baghdad to offer witness to the people of Iraq during the war. Kelly is co-founder of Voices in the Wilderness and has led 20 delegations to Iraq since 1996 to raise public awareness about the humanitarian crisis caused by economic sanctions against Iraq. For this work Kelly has been nominated three times for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Geri Haynes is the immediate past president of Washington Physicians for Social Responsibility. Haynes organized and led three delegations to Iraq between 1999 and 2002 to raise awareness about the public health crisis in Iraq and was last there in May 2003 to assess the humanitarian situation after the war, traveling with a team from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer newspaper.
